High Mountain takes Ranch Rodeo crown

For the fifth time in nine years, High Mountain Ranch took top honors at the Thermopolis Lions Club Ranch Rodeo held over the weekend at the Hot Springs County Fairgrounds arena.

After surrendering last year's Ranch Rodeo crown to Rafter C, the High Mountain Ranch crew collected wins in the team doctoring, branding and trailer loading events to win its third Ranch Rodeo title since 2011. High Mountain Ranch also won in 2006 and 2007.

High Mountain Ranch team members included CJ Nye, Brad Peil, Dawn Peil and Shiloh Wallingford, as well as local businessperson Colleen Hanson of Red Rock Family Practice. Kathy Carlstrom was the Calcutta winner.

Rafter C finished second and was composed of Mark Brewster, Cayde Cuprak, TC Cuprak and Beau Jackson, as well as local businessperson Jim Joiner of Jim's Lawn Service. Connie Hart was the high bidder for the team in the Calcutta for second place.

Three Geese Land and Cattle, which won the ribbon roping, milking and cow riding events, finished third. Team members included Travis Brooks, TJ Owsley, Amanda Vass and TY Vass, along with local businessperson Jeff Myers of Myers Clinic. R&C Trucks and Big Horn Redi Mix were the high bidders for the team in the Calcutta.

The Traveling Trophy stayed with High Mountain Ranch after the group won its third title in six years. Retired trophies are on display at Shorty's Liquor.

Brooks of Three Geese Land and Cattle was named Top Cowhand for this year's Ranch Rodeo.

More than a dozen youngsters competed in the mutton bustin'.

According to Trenda Moore of the Thermopolis Lions Club, a portion of the money raised during the Calcutta and all the net concession proceeds both days are provided by the club locally for eye care

Joint Education Committee now accepting comments on webpage

The Wyoming Legislature’s Joint Education Committee has launched a webpage dedicated to providing citizens with a public comment tool related to the committee’s ongoing study of the governance and administration of public education in Wyoming. A link titled “Education Governance Study” is now prominently displayed on the Legislature’s homepage at www.wyoleg.gov.

The webpage provides an outlet for citizens to participate in this undertaking by completing a short survey, as well as the option to submit a public comment to the committee on this issue. Survey responses and comments should be submitted by Aug. 15 to ensure that they are included in the final report that will be considered by the committee later this year.

At the conclusion of the 2014 Budget Session, the legislature’s Management Council directed the Joint Education Committee to review the state’s administration of public education in Wyoming during this year’s interim period. As part of this process, the Joint Education Committee has been utilizing the professional services of Cross & Joftus to identify and frame the necessary steps to develop a more effective allocation of state-level responsibilities supporting the delivery of a high-quality public education system in Wyoming.

In addition to soliciting public comment,

Cross & Joftus will be conducting a series of discussions with business and civic stakeholders throughout the state through mid-August and the results of these discussions will also be included in the final report.

Cross & Joftus will then submit their conclusions to the committee and brief members on the report’s findings and will provide subsequent recommendations by late November. Opportunities for public comment during the committee’s consideration of the report will also be provided.

For more information about this process, citizens may contact the Legislative Service Office at 307-777-7881 or visit the legislature’s website at www.wyoleg.gov.

Mead unveils energy strategy website

Gov. Matt Mead unveiled a new website Monday that highlights Wyoming’s energy strategy. It is a resource for people interested in energy, the environment and the economy and also tracks progress on the energy strategy.

Mead released “Leading the Charge: Wyoming’s Action Plan for Energy, Environment, and Economy” last year and implementation began right away. The strategy contains a series of initiatives, which Wyoming state agencies have undertaken ever since.

“Energy and the environment are critical to the people of Wyoming and this strategy aims at striking a balance for our economic prosperity and quality of life,” Mead said. “We have been busy with the initiatives that the public identified for the energy strategy and now people have another way to get updates and give feedback on these efforts.”

The website energy.wyo.gov has an overview of the energy strategy and progress updates on each initiative. “As we start new efforts like the water strategy, developing an Integrated Test Center, and exploring an industrial project to add value to natural resources, this website will be an important tool for all involved,” Mead said.

The Integrated Test Center is an idea Mead supports. He asked for and received $15 million from the legislature to construct a testing facility that would house researchers looking at new commercial uses of CO2. The facility would be located at a Wyoming coal-fired power plant. The governor announced Monday that Black Hills Power and Basin Electric have expressed interest in learning more about hosting the Test Center.

“I appreciate that these two companies will explore the possibility of hosting the Integrated Test Center,” Mead said. “The research that would happen there has great potential to help the coal industry while also reducing emissions. I am pleased that we are still moving forward.”
